The returns from the city of Cranston have increased Rhode Island's registry vote to 150,445; of this total, 76,693 are women and 73,752 are men. This gives the women a lead of 2,941. The total registration of men, however, is more than 10,000 greater than in the last presidential election. The board of canvassers has started the work of checking up the books for errors in registration, as the first step towards the completion of the voting list for the November election.

In the total registration of women is included many who later will be transferred to the real estate list or the personal property list, and will vote as such. This will reduce women's registry vote. It is necessary, however, for every person to first register in order to become a voter.

The figures given indicate only the number of persons who have actually registered from July 1, 1935 to July 1, 1936, and do not include real estate or personal property voters.

The striking electricians expect to return to work Tuesday next as it is said a satisfactory agreement has been reached with the employing contractors. The men were receiving 75 cents an hour, and their request was an advance to 87 1/2 cents. This was denied and they went on strike a week ago and increased the demand to 90 cents. There have been several meetings of the parties in interest, and finally the employers made an offer of 85 cents an hour, the highest price paid to carpenters, and higher than paid to some others in the building trades. The employers are inclined to accept 85 cents and will probably enter into such an agreement with the employers before Tuesday.

The catch basin, at Broad and Main street, is covered by a two-piece iron cover that forms a part of the sidewalk. Friday morning an automobile backed against the cover and one of the pieces dropped into the catch basin. When that prevailed in that section was made plain. The catch basin proper was filled with filth, the overflow into the pipe that leads to the Pawcatuck river, not having sufficient force to carry away the filth, and leave the basin filled with water, as was intended.

Police Chief Brown guarded the location as a precaution of public safety, and the highway commissioners were notified. The iron covers were put back in place and the sanitary condition of the catch basin will soon be improved.

Justice Vincent, in the supreme court, rendered a decision Friday, in the case of Mrs. Abel P. Randall, formerly of Westerly, administratrix of the estate of Joseph W. Hungerford against Rensselaer L. Curtis, receiver of the Atlantic bank, Providence, with a resident for the implements. This suit has been in the court several years and was to recover the sum of $7800 belonging to Mr. Hungerford. Attorney Samuel H. Davis represented Mrs. Randall.

The case resulted out of the failure of the Atlantic National bank, of which J. W. Morton was an official, Mr. Morton had been entrusted with $7,800 for deposit by W. J. Hungerford, then old man and instead of placing it to Hungerford's account it was banked in the name of Ella G. Morton, wife of the bank official.

When the bank failed the account was seized by the receivers and suit was brought by Mrs. Randall to compel them to return the money. In the opinion of the court the money is the property of the receiver.

A poverty society was held in the chapel of the Methodist church Wednesday night under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society. There was a good attendance and the affair proved most enjoyable. A fine was levied on everything worn that was not in accordance with the rules and many appeared in grotesque and laughable costumes. One woman had on an old shoe of her own, while the other foot was encased in a shoe of her husband's; others wore stockings of a color and texture which never had met before. The prize for the most poverty-stricken appearance was awarded Elmer Beckwith.

Like Pulling Teeth

Deflation will in some respects resemble the pulling of teeth, but it's got to come.—Rochester Herald.

Too many men wait until they are done to a turn before turning over a new leaf.

The prime for the most poverty-stricken appearance was awarded Elmer Beckwith.

Why Bother With the League?

Well, anyway, no country will ever again want to get into a war with the United States. It takes too long to get out.—Providence Tribune.

If some men were paid according to their worth their pay days would be few and far between.
